Father of Iris Analysis

Ignaz von Peczely

(January 26, 1826 – July 14, 1911)

was a Hungarian scientist considered the father of modern Iris Analysis

Von Peczely first thought of Iris Analysis when caring for an owl with a broken leg.

After noticing a spot in the owl's eye he hypothesized a link between the two and later tested this theory with other animals and people.

And he established a strong connection between a person's Iris and multiple organs like Lungs, Kidney, Throat and Brain.

Stephen Richards Covey - USA
